SUMMARY

Originally, I started out as a musician and a guitar teacher, and I played in a relatively busy rock band for 10 years. During my years in the band, I also worked in food retail, finance, customer service and sales either as a manager, a salesman or as a customer and support advisor.

After turning for good the music chapter of my life in May 2020, the need for a career change, creativity and learning new things led me to studying web development part-time, after work and during my weekends.

A year later, I quit my job to study web development full time and in March 2022, I finally landed my first Junior Frontend Developer role at PageSuite.
